Early Days

N October 5, 1921, the North Carolina College for Women celebrated the thirtieth year of its activity with the biggest building program and largest enrollment in its history. The first year of its work found three buildings, dormitory space for less than one hundred and fifty boarders, with a teaching force of fifteen, and an enrollment of 225 students.

By 1902 the faculty had increased to about thirty members. The library, which was for a time in rooms number 2 and 3, Main, had three thousand volumes. The training school had been built; the old infirmary, which is now a practice hall; the steam laundry, a large dining room, and a well-arranged kitchen all showed the growth of the college. By additions to the dormitories and by renting several neighboring residences the dormitory capacity was then about three hundred and fifty. An old annual of 1902 records the great comfort that had been given by the substitution of gas for kerosene lamps, the introduction of single beds, and the placing on every floor of porcelain baths.

Courses were offered in three departments: the normal, the business, and the domestic science. There was also a special course in which a student could get training in vocal culture, physical culture, and industrial art. The course of study required four years for completion, after which the student received a lifetime license to teach in North Carolina.

In 1919 the name of the college was changed from the State Normal and Industrial College to the North Carolina College for Women. In the fall of 1921 it was recognized by the Southern Association of Colleges as a standard college and became one of the six so honored in the state. At present there are sixteen buildings on the campus, six of which are domitories, two class buildings, a domestic science cottage, the Y. W. C. A. hut, training school, laundry, and dairy. Dr. McIver's residence is also on the campus.

With the generous appropriation of the Legislature of 1921 three new dormitories were started, a new wing for McIver, a new wing to the dining hall, and a domestic science building were put under construction. The dining room was ready for occupancy when the students returned in the fall, and the new wing to McIver and the domestic science building will be completed this spring. The three new dormitories will be open next fall to accommodate the three hundred and fifty or four hundred new students who are expected to enter.

In the fall of 1921 the enrollment of students was 982 and the number of faculty members 109. The first class to complete the four-year course was the Class of 1896, with nineteen members. The Senior Class of 1922 has ninety-five members.

Degrees are now given at the college in three different departments music, arts, and science. There is a business department under the direction of Mr. E. J. Forney, who has been at the college since it was founded.

The library, a building of two stories with 18,000 volumes, is entirely inadequate for the needs of the students, and plans have already been drawn up to treble its capacity. The infirmary, which was built soon after the foundation of the college, has been turned into a music hall, and a new infirmary has been built with seventy-five beds and all modern equipment. An efficient staff of two lady physicians and two trained nurses are in charge at the infirmary.

The new dormitories contain every modern convenience, and sun parlors and sitting rooms provide a cozy and homelike atmosphere. The contrast between the comforts of 1902—gas lights—with those today, the lighting fixtures, the long mirrors in the doors, the steam-heated rooms, and the beautiful sun parlors and sitting rooms—is interesting to note.

The campus itself is considered one of the most beautiful in the state. Many trees, shrubs, flowers and green slopes give a lovely effect in the spring. Peabody Park, a woodland of fifty acres, is owned by the college and is kept entirely for the students. Walks and bridges have been put in, but aside from that it is undisturbed. The outdoor theater, where Park Night exercises are held at commencement, is in Peabody.

Three members of the original faculty of the college are still in active service. Miss Gertrude Mendenhall, who taught mathematics when the college opened in 1892, is still at her post and is steering the daughters of many of her former pupils through the intricacies of freshman math. Miss Mendenhall is a graduate of Wellesley and was a graduate student at Bryn Mawr. Miss Viola Boddie, who is at present head of the Latin department, taught the first students at the college the fact that "All Gaul is divided into three parts." Miss Boddie is a graduate of Peabody Normal College, and was a student at Cornell University and at the Berlitz School of Languages, Chicago and Chautauqua. E. J. Forney, head of the commercial department and treasurer of the college, taught shorthand, typewriting and bookkeeping in 1892, and also served as bursar.

EXTENSION WORK Minnie L. Jamison

Alumnae Association

The work of the Alumnæ Association for the year 1921-1922 has been a continuation of the work begun last year.

This year's officers and board members include:

Maude	Bunn	BATTLE									President
Nettie	DIXON	Smith									. Vice-President
Ethel	C. Boi	LINGER									Secretary-Treasurer

BOARD MEMBERS

One Year: Mrs. Lizzie Weatherspoon, Mary Robinson, Mrs. Mame Banner Gant. Two Years: Mrs. Julius Cone, Jane Summereli, Eleanor Watson. Three Years: Anne Beam, Lean Bodie, Lucy Crip.

The three chief interests of the association have been along the lines of increasing the membership in the association, the strengthening of the county organizations, and the beginning of the erection of the Alumma Home.

Owing to the fact that it is seeking this year to improve its financial status, the association has been obliged to stress the payment of fees. The response has been good, but the goal of 100 per cent membership of all graduates has not yet been reached. Since work on the erection of the Alumna: Home has been begun, the payment of pledges has also necessarily been urged.

These two campaigns, then, for increased membership and for the building have been the chief work of the association for this year.

Incidental to the carrying on of these campaigns has been the organization of the Class Secretaries Bureau. Great effort has been made to enroll the interest of every graduate of the college in the work of the Alumnæ Association through a secretary in each class and through the establishing of the Class Connection Fund.

The Class Connection Fund was started by the Class of 1921. This class pledged, almost to a member, twenty-five dollars each, to be paid over a period of five years' time in five-dollar installments; the fund to be used for whatever enterprise the alumnae were engaged in at the time of its collection. This class is now urging previous and coming classes to help make this fund a permanent institution, in order that the work of the association may proceed on sound financial basis.

Aside from the two financial campaigns, there have been many other alumnar activities of interest during the year. The building and establishing of the cafeteria has been the chief interest. Then, in addition to this, Founder's Day, the Teachers' assembly banquet, the Christmas bazaar at the college, reunion dinners and meetings in the various counties, and the commencement reunions and banquet, have been of interest to all.

The establishing of an Alumnæ Council proclaims a constructive step in the alumnæ work. It has been planned that this council, composed of alumnæ and college faculty,

General office work has included daily correspondence, the publication of the alumnæ quarterly, keeping of records, and the keeping of all accounts and rendering of reports.

In conclusion, then, the outstanding work of the Alumnæ Association for this year might be said to include:

The beginning of the erection of the Alumnæ Home.
 The establishing of the Class Secretaries Bureau.

(3) The establishing of the Class Connection Fund.

Class Poem

A-down the long brown road, Like good friends arm-in-arm, come memorics Of all our happy, golden school days. Rich are they, full of friendships rare, Beautiful with the radiance of past years, Brightened by smiles, remembered for tears.

Far, far beyond the blue of the horizon, Like stars on wintry nights, come the now faint, Now bright, glad beacons of the future. Wonderful are they, full of an infinite glory, Beautiful with the radiance of ideals and inspirations, Brightened by hope, the haunt of consecrations.

Smiling, a-throb with the joy of living, Come the radiant days of the present, Like friends, sincere and true. Rich are they, pulsating, glad and free, Wholesome, uplifting, worthy---Worthy, O College, of thee! EMELINE GOFORTH.

History of the Class of '22

T came to pass in the year one thousand nine hundred and eighteen that there befell a great sorrow in the land of North Carolina College, for, behold! the eldest daughters of the land took their departure out into that vast and mysterious place called Life. And the hearts of their sisters were heavy in that they should see them no more. And there went out through all the country of High School heralds arking that new daughters be given unto the Alma Mater. Now in those days there dwelt in this country young maidens fair to behold, and they arose and came in answer to the biddings of the heralds. And they loved their Alma Mater and found favor in her sight. The maidens were called Twenty-two, and they were known by their colors, green and white.

Now in those days it was the custom to prepare entertainments for the youngest born. And it came to pass that numerous entertainments were prepared for Twenty-two, and she arose and went thence adorned in festive raiment, and great was the rejoicing in all the lend at that time.

But all was not merrymaking and rejoicing in this land of North Carolina College, for, indeed, it was a land of work and worry, as well as a land of delight. And, behold! Twenty-two did enter into it all with a brave heart, and did confront the monster Math with valiant courage worthy of daughters of the Alma Mater.

It came to pass in those days that there did befall a great and scrious plague called the influenza, which swept through all the land, and, coming at last to N. C. College, greatly disturbed all the people. And it happened that the trouble was so great that it was not permitted that any meetings should be held indoors. So in the early days of Twenty-two the whole band did assemble out under the open sky and did organize. and elect for their first president Mary Griffin of the land of Shelby. And the motto, "Conquer," they did take to go ever before and lead them on.

In those days came one saying, "Upon you all I must put a bondage, that this dreadful disease may be wiped out. And they were put in quarantine until Christmas drew nigh. Now it was rumored abroad that the bondage should not be lifted for the holidays, and there was sorrowing in all the land, for the maidens did yearn for their old homes. Then came that same one who had appeared unto them before, saying, "Arise, go thy way, for I say unto you that your bondage is lifted." And, lo and behold! it was Christmas-And there was great rejoicing through all the land. And they arose and departed, and came unto their old homes, where they did remain one score days and two, rejoicing and feasting. And in the beginning of the new year they returned and took up their work.

Now in those days came examinations and swept through all of the land of N. C. College, favoring some and plunging others into the depths of despair. And from thence on the time did pass quickly enough. And Twenty-two did work and play together, and did sing together this song of her own making:

Striving ever upward, To all our visions true; Our hearts we pledge, our loyalty To thee, O Twenty-two!

And Elizabeth Calvert of the land of Raleigh was the recond president thereof. And soon it was the month of June, and Twenty-two did arise and depart unto the land of her forefathers, a Sophomore Class, full of wisdom and grace.

And when it was again September, Twenty-two arose and came once more unto her Alma Mater, and this wise and diligent class, with Branson Price as a leader, did begin the second year.

And it came to pass that Twenty-two soon did plan for an entertainment for the youngest born of the Alma Mater, the Class of Twenty-three, that she might be made to feel more at home here in this new and strange land. And they sent unto Twentythree invitations saving:

Sophomore

New Girl Masquerade On Saturday, the fifteenth, Just as the clock strikts eight, Many folk from fiction land Will gather for a fete. As fiction lad or lass, come Join us and be gay— It is until ten-thirty We linger there and play.

And it came to pass that in the month of November of the same year and on the eleventh day Twenty-two did assemble in the hut of the Young Women's Christian Association, and there did hold a ceremony, and it was called the Dedication of the Sophomore Fireplace. And the Cless of Twenty-two was filled with the spirit of loyalty at that time and did feel closer drawn together.

And in those days did come members of Twenty-two, strong and filled with the love of sport, and they did join with their whole hearts in athletics, and did win much praise for their valiant playing at hockey, basketball, and tennis. And the sophomore hockey team did put the enemy to flight and did win honor to its name. And it came to pass that Jesse Rose that same year was the champion tennis player, for she did win above all others.

And the first half of the sophomore year did pass away, and it was the second half. And the class did choose Jocelyn McDowell as president, and under her leadership did accomplish much good work.

And it came to pass that when the class was gathered together the thoughts of the elder sisters of the Class of Twenty did enter their hearts, for they did love them well. And they did prepare for their sisters a country fair, and a cloth was spread with much fine food. And they two arose, the Classes of Twenty and Twenty-two, and departed thence into the park and did there abide even until nightfall making merry and feasing. And in the same year came Twenty to her sister, Twenty-two, saying unto her, "We would that you, our sister, carry for us the chain of daisies at our graduation." And the heart of Twenty-two was filled with exceeding great joy, and at the appointed time she arose and did as she was bid.

And the fall of one thousand nine hundred and twenty was the third year. And the members of Twenty-two were called juniors, and they were more joyful than ever before. And they did choose Juanita Koontz as their president, and did begin work with great diligence. And straightway they did set up Ye Junior Shoppe and sold their wares in the public places to the multitudes that did gather there.

In those days there came unto Alma Mater one who was the fairest of all, the Class of Twenty-four. And they found favor in the sight of Twenty-two, and to them Twentytwo was a sister class, and she in turn rejoiced and was exceeding glad that to her was given such a beloved little sister. And to these new sisters the Class of Twenty-two did send invitations, saying unto them: "Come, join with us in a class meeting." And they did as they were bid, and the two classes were excleared the cne to the other. And the fall and winter passed away and, lo! it was spring. And to Lucile Mason was given the leadership of the spring term.

Now at this time the members of the class began to talk among themselves concerning the Class of Twenty-one, and they did send invitations unto them asking that they come to a banquet prepared for them after the style of the Dutch. And they did as they were bid.

And the fall of one threasand nine hundred and twenty-one was the fourth year, and, lo and behold! the Class of Twenty-two were called seniors. And it came to pass that as they returned this year unto their Alma Mater there was more dignity manifested among them, and upon them was settled much responsibility. And to this class was entrusted the instruction of the young of the school called Curry.

Now the seniors gave to Sarah Cannady the leadership of the fall term, and to Martha Bradley the leadership of the spring term. And they did rule with much dignity and wisdom.

Then, following the custom of old, the juniors, the Class of Twenty-three, did prepare for Twenty-two a banquet and sent unto her an invitation in the month of March, bidding her come to the feast which was prepared for her. And the seniors arose and went in to the feast with much rejoicing, and the juniors did likewise, and there was feasting and dance until the eleventh hour.

And now commencement was at hand, and in the heart of Twenty-two was mingled joy and lamentation. And it came to pass that when the Class of Twenty-two had finished the things appointed to 1er that she should do, she departed and came unto a place called Life, and here she continues steadfastly to do service, even as her sisters did before her. PAULINE LUCAS.

Class Prophecy

l dipped into the future, Far as human eye could see, Saw a vision of my classmates, And all the wonders they would be.

IXTEEN years! Could it be possible that nearly a decade had slipped past me since that fateful day in June, 1922, when I had stood with my ninety-three classmates and received that long-toiled-for "sheepskin"—that insignia of my aspirations, the "open sesame"—so I had thought—to the door of success. Sixteen lone years, most of which I had spent in seclusion from the world and in ignorance of what had happened in the great area of events and to the fate of my Alma Mater and the ninety-three who had been with me on that auspicious diplomation.

getting occasion. At last I was returning to the world and was making my first trip back to my college—the scene of the happiest years of my life. It was commencement that I was going to—the commencement of the Class of 1938, another Green and White class. News of the college had already come to me—how it was now the greatest university for women in America, and what a wonderful president it had in Martha Bradley. Martha, one of those old classmates. . . I would see her and hear of others. .

The train stopped and I got off to find myself in a huge modem depot. This could not be Greensboro. I must have made a mistake. But my eye caught sight of a brass plate which contained the reassuring words, "Teague Field, N. C. U. W. Station. Built by the Mizelle Construction Co.," I read. So Hazel has realized her college-day ambition and gotten a station behind Teague Field! Memories of those dear old days began to throng to my mind, and half in a dream I allowed myself to be conducted by a willing Ethiopian, who had the letters "N. C. U. W." on his spotless uniform, to the door of a nearby building.

"Here yuh is, miss," spake my dusky guide. "This here is the Alumnibus building of the No'th Ca'lina Unnyversity for Womens, what yuh wanted. Boss Ruth Higgins will see to yuh."

As I entered the large, empty room a paper which was on the table caught my eye. The word Carolinian flashed before me, and in an instant I was pouring over its contents. But how my old friend had changed! . . . "Largest Collegiate Daily," I read. "Leased Wire, International Press Association, Wireless Service." And this was a special alumnar issue. First Probably some of the 22's would be mentioned. Nor was I disappointed, for the headlines in no uncertain manner informed me that more of the Class of 1922 had attained fame than of any other class in the history of the institution. I devoured every word of the article, and this is what I read:

"The Class of 1922 has more famous figures in its ranks than any of the illustrious classes that have graduated from here. Its members have entered the fields of literature, art, science, education, and business, most of them having attained unusual distinction in their chosen field.

"Government has claimed a goodly number. Five—Vera Keech, Katherine Yoder, Gussie Finch, Mary Katherine Liles, and Mozelle Hunt—are at present in the United States Senate. Mabel Stamper is Speaker of the House. Annie Bridges, Gertrude Fox, and Eva Lee Sink are members of the cabinet; Katie Whitley is governor of North Carolina; Elizabeth Stanford, Collina Caldwell, Mary McDonald, and Mary York are in the foreign diplomatic service.

"The world of business has claimed a great number. May McArn, Lucy Hunter, Clara Craven, and Foda White stand unparalleled among the financial wizards of America. Lia Ward Konce heads the world's largest dye plants; Millie Kanipe, Ethel Kearns, and Florine Davenport are bank presidents, while Irene Perkins is president of the National Association of Bankers. Lila Bell is owner of the Transatlantic Aero Service, having been the first woman to circumnavigate the globe. Louine Murchison and Ruby Hodgin have accumulated millions in food manufacturing. Margaret Blair, Louella Koonts, and Elizabeth McCracken are also important figures in the realm of manufacture.

"Joyce Rudisill, Clara Brawley, and Jessie Baxley have made names for themselves in the field of the novel; Huldah Holloman is author of the most important book of the century on 'Government'; Emeline Goforth is leader of the new school of poetry: Mary John is the modern Matthew Arnold, according to the estimate of her criticism by Helen Dunn Creasy, editor of the Allantic Monthly. The latest play of Pauline Lucas is now being produced at the Ashby Playhouse in New York. This theater is owned by the well-known producer, Lucretia Ashby, another '22. Annie Pearl Dobbins has recently published the last volume in her series of 'Great Men and Women of North Carolina."

"Several famous actors have come out of the class. Madame Germaine, formerly Marie Bonitz, has, in collaboration with her renowned husband, become the greatest Shakspearena tragedienne of the day. Elizabeth Lindsay has made her name in comedy and has retired as one of the wealthiest women of the stage. Sarah Cannady and Frances Singleton, the most famous dancers since Pavlowa, are at present touring Africa with their ballet. They have with them Mattie Angel, as pianist, and Myrtle Warren, as soloist. The business of the company is in the hands of Helen Leach, the financial expert. As a musical composer Agnes Cannady is known in two continents. Rosa Lee Watts, Sudie Rhodes, Olive Chandley, and Hazel Worsely are on the concert stage. The new musical magazine now published in Chicago has at its head Mary Louise Bender.

"Some of the other great lights in world affairs that have come out of this class are Carey Batchelor, head of the sociology department of the University of Michigan; Zelian Hunter, the great evangelist; Rena King, the renowned surgeon of Johns Hopkins; Hannah Mae Fleetwood, the inventor; Mabel Eure, the costume designer; Daisy Hunter, Marie Davenport, and Mildred Burch, the great New York lawyers; Jessie Rose, holder of the world's swimming championship; and Juanita Koontz, the well-known educator."

And all this had come out of my old class! But what of the not-so-fortunate-as-tobecome-famous ones.

"'Josh' Brans!' I exclaimed. . . . Greetings were in order, and then I persuaded the two to give me some information about themselves and the other non-famous ones of '22. Needless to say, they did not need much persuasion. "Brans," " said Joscelyn, "besides managing her husband and family, is city manager of Greensboro; but I have my hands full with those twins of mine. Grace Former is primary superintendent of North Carolina. Oh, yes, she is married—of course. But most of them are, for that matter. Oh, do you remember that time when Pete Murphy urged us to get married?

"Kate Mitchell and Lucile Mason, the inseparables, are running rival newspapers. Margaret Heinsberger is in Africa, teaching the Ethiops how to cut up cats, and Sallie Tucker is managing our new depot. Elizabeth Foust is running a dancing school in New York; Liz Calvert is on the staff of Life; Mabel Carpenter is a government pure food expert; Connie Heafner is—"

"Goodness! Do give me a chance," 'Brans' broke in. "Connie is teaching English in France. No; it's French in England. Charlotte Daughety is a grand architect, and Muriel Barnes is in business in Greensboro. And, would you believe it, Edith Cunningham and Julia Mae Southerland are in the movies! They're fine, too. Elva Rosser is lecturing in Honolulu. Rachel Barwick is coach of the national hockey team, and Junsie Underwood is abroad, teaching the Stocth I assies the game."

Here Branson stopped for a breath, but started again before anyone had a chance to put in a word.

"And, oh, yes; Athleen Turnage is running a bakery in Alaska and Ruth Teachey is selling typewriters in Mexico. Ethel Baugh is in Paris—at the French Academy, I beliver. Gertrude Fox and Sarah Smith are farming oranges . . . a new kind . . . in Florida. Are there any others? Josephine Weaver? Oh, Joe is with some big New York publishing house and is doing quite well. Oh, I left out one or two! They say that Ethel Brunm has revolutionized the Latin language by her discoveries in that field. Mattie Bright has opened up a real estate office in Siberia. Rachel Ivey is in charge of the historical museum in Raleigh, and Cleo Holloman has turned farmer. And now tell us

I was destined never to learn the end of that sentence, for I felt myself punched violently in the ribs and heard a masculine voice utter these startling syllables: "Miss Singleton, will you kindly wake Miss Cantrell up? Miss Branson, will you please proceed?"

ANNE CANTRELL.

Our Junior

If she had the brains of Virginia Terrell, Iola Parker's eyes, The hair of Sara Harper, Mary Trundle's size,

The voice of Mollie Mat'ieson, Mavis Goodman's grace, The ability of Mary Peacock To keep the juniors at a pace,

The sincerity of Virginia Harris, Stella Williams' pep, The charm of Mildred Lupton, Matilda Lattimore's rep, Dorothy Clements' talent, The knowledge of Mary Sue Beam, The dimples of Frances Watson— She'd be the junior of our dream.

To Blue Ridge

From the land of the sky, Where the world is high, And each peak wears its night-cap cloud; Where the dead old day Has been laid away With a moonlit sky for a shroud; Where the balsam air Works a cure that's rare, And the crisp of the wind is health; Where the heaven's own blue Makes a saint of you, And the sunset's gold is your wealth; Where the dew is damp On your shivering camp. Where the ferns and mosses are pearled; From the land of the sky, Where the hills ride high, I salute-from the top of the world.

DELPHIA, Cornelia, and Dike! Surely they are the recipients of unending love, loyalty and praise from every student of the college.

Truly, Adelphian, Cornelian, and Dikean represent to every North Carolina College girl all that is best, the truest and most inspiring in college life. In her own society the student finds her ideal. She realizes that in it is the best way of expressing her intellectuality, her principles, and her joy in service. And service is the goal towards which the three societies strive. They attempt, through a detailed organization and a definite plan of work, to be of service to the college and the state.

ADELPHIAN OFFICERS

Adelphian Society Song

Shoulder to shoulder, hearts filled with devotion, With purpose not aimless, but earnest and true; United by all of the ties of deep friendship,

We bring, O Adelphia, our homage to you.

We pledge to you loyalty, long and unending, Loyalty, which will be firm, will be sure; Devotion, we pledge you, which never shall perish, And love, which through all coming time will endure.

With courage undaunted, we'll march ever onward, Up heights to be won, along paths strange and new; But, now and forever, one great band of sisters, We'll be, O Adelphia, still loyal to you.

CORNELIAN OFFICERS

Cornelian Society Song

In joy and praise come let us sing, With anthem clear and strong; Let all Cornelian voices ring In free, exultant song

Of pride for that fair name we bear, Cornelian—glorious word!— To make us gladly do and dare, Whene'er 'tis thought, whene'er 'tis heard.

We'll onward, upward ever move, Our footsteps forward pressed, Together move in sister love Unto the mountain's crest To gain the fair, wide-spreading view Which round the mountain lies, And give us understanding new— Enlighten our eager eyes.

May Cornelia's name have ne'er a stain From any a daughter's deed. For her all glory will be given, And give her honor's need; For firm and staunch we e'r will stand Unto each other true, And loyal to our noble band, Hers, yea, her own, our whole lives throug's.

Dikean Society Song

Dike, who speaks with reverberant grandeur, Through listening portals of true womanhood, lato thy vastness, we come now entrusting Powers as yet latent with will's hope imbued, Glad for the toiling, the common endeavor, Glad for the wideness of ways to be won, To do for the deed's sake, still keeping the vision, Trasting secure in the love 'round us thrown.

Stamped with the beauty and light of thy image, We would go forth with a creative faith; Builders potential and makers of highway, Easing for others paths they may take, And as the sumset gives place to the sumrise, And as the sumset gives place to the sumrise, After us cometh the child of the dawn To fashion the fabric of dreams scarce completed, And serve the forvere. O light, farther on.

Tau Pi Delta

(Flame of Service)

Tau Pi Delta was formed at the North Carolina College for Women in the fall of 1921 by the Student Government Association. It was formed as an honor society to recognize the students who have shown themselves well-rounded leaders in college life. The eleven charter members were elected by the students on a basis of five qualifications: (1) college spirit, (2) intellectuality, (3) special talents, (4) leadership, (5) character. One charter member was elected from the student body-at-large, six from the Senior Class, and four from the Junior Class. All future members will be admitted by the society on the basis of the same qualifications.

Quill Club

The Quill Club is a literary organization composed of those members of the Junior and Senior classes who, through work on the college magazine or newspaper, or through exceptionally good work in English, have shown particular ability and interest in writing. The club was organized in the fall of 1921, with charter members coming from the staff of the Coraddi and the Carolinian. The idea of organizing a club of this type was originated by Mr. Thornton, who found the hearty support of the publication staffs and a few members of the faculty who are particularly interested in the furtherance of good literature on our campus. The purpose of the club is to bring together those persons who appreciate good literature, and thus stimulate them to produce original composition. Written contributions are brought to each meeting by every member of the club, and each contribution is criticised in an open, friendly manner so as to enccurage and help along the amateur journalist.

The 1921-'22 Entertainment Course

CCORDING to the u-ual custom, a series of lectures, plays, and musical programs for the 1921-22 college year was arranged by a committe appointed for the purpose. The program decided upon proved to be unusually delightful and worth-while. A group of lectures early in the fall by Dallas Lore Sharp was followed by the presentation of Eugene O'Neill's astounding success, "Beyond the Horizon" by the Shakespeare Playhouse Company, with Frank McEntee taking the leading role.

Some weeks later Mr. and Mrs. Mich:taro Ongawa, the famous Japanese players, appeared before the student body, demonstrating for their benefit some of the peculiar habits of the people of the Far East, and delighting them with interpretations of several Japanese songs and dances.

In the early spring the Griffes Group, composed of Sascha Jacobinoff, violinist; Edna Thomas, soloist; and Olga Steeb, pianist, presented a musical program. These were followed by another group of musicians, the New York Quartet, including Edna Fassett Sterling, soprano; Florence Mulford, contralto; Wesley Howard, tenor; and Ardrea Sarto, baritone, with William Reddick at the piano, all of whom are artists of unusual ability. Owing to the character of the numbers provided, the entire ceurse proved to be a distinct success.

Christmas

EMELINE GOFORTH, '22

Peace, peace and calm— An infinite deep silence— Breathing of wind among the silvery trees— Perfect and sweet, A faraway, low anthem, Borne by the Christmas, dawn o'er land and seas.

Cay, gay and glad— The sunbeams clear and dancing Penetrate through windows, decked in evergreens. Merrily and mad— The sleigh bells cheerily ringing. Bring back all hearts on Christmas day to dear home scenes.

Twilight—deep calm— All hearts on earth are lifting Rich songs of gratitude—the snowflakes breathlessly fall. Poor, rich, sick, well— To all the Spirit whispers: "Peace, peace on earth and free good-will to all."

A Hebrew Supper

LOUISE FARBER, '25, Adelphian

As I sit at my window listening to the soft strains of "Humoresque," all objects around me gradually grow obscure, and I am again at home. I enter the dining room. Tonight is Friday night—the beginning of the Hebrew Sabbath.

The first thing that I see is my sweet mother, who is uttering a Hebrew benediction before three candles. How the candles burn! Their flames represent the hope and faith of the Jews. They flicker, then blaze forth with renewed energy. Those sof; words my mother is uttering I have heard from infancy, and they are so deeply planted within my heart that they can never be uprooted.

An hour passes. Then my father, my two brothers with my baby brother, and my three cousins enter. They take their respective seats at the table. My father utters the Hebrew Kaddish, and my baby brother, who is four years old, attempts to say it also.

There are the "Sahbbos Chalos" (Sabbath breads) at the head of the table. My father cuts them, and immediately the supper is served.

Conversation usually touches upon different topics, but tonight the subject is about Russia and her suffering Jews. My mother has just received a letter from her sister, who asks for help, for money, for clothes. She is hopelessly crippled as a result of the war, when the Germans drove her husband and her from their home. We send money and clothes. She receives the clothes and sometimes the money. Money has to be concealed in a letter or else the Bolsheviks will take it. Once she received a letter, but the money that was in it was gone.

Supper is now over, and as they arise from the table I am awakened from my reverie by the sound of ragtime and find that my eyes are not dry.

The Masqueraders

HAT is it that is old yet ever new; that changes yet remains unchanged; that charms alike the sad and gay; that serves both past and present? It is the play and the makers of plays.

Let us journey through the ages from the days of ancient Greece to 1922. Antigone steps forth, in her nobility, to represent the renowned age of Pericles.

Passing down the chain of years, we see "Gibour," the Passion Play, expressive of the drama of the medieval Franks. Immortal Shakespeare flashes into view with "Romeo and Juliet," the culmination of Elizabethan art. Journeying further we come to the time of Louis XVI to powdered wigs and silken hose—and see Rostand portray the folly of youth and age in "The Romancers"; till finally the twentieth century dawns in its cleverness and charm—we, the modern age, see our own reflections in "Six-Cylinder Love."

What is true of the past we may prophesy for the future: a drama that, though changing, will still remain unchanged with its appeal to the ages that are to come.

"Fowl" Gossip

It was bright and early. The still morning air was interrupted by the occasional falling of dead leaves, which fluttered lightly to the ground and lay there, very quietly waiting! A worthy descendant of the ever-famed Chanticleer awoke with a start! Quivering with some unexpressed excitement, he sprang quickly down from his roost and walked three or four steps; then, with a gleeful exclamation, he flapped his sides delightedly with his wings and cried: "Cock-a-doodle-doo!"

Far and wide the echo resounded! All was quiet for the space of a peck at a lone piece of corn, then in each neighboring barnyard, one after the other, a similar sound rent the air—a similar sound, yet how unuttrably different!

Bantam's high-pitched voice was followed by the deep tones of Rhode Island Red. Brahma hoarsely joined in. Each, in his own peculiar way, told to his fellows, as near as he could understand it, what he had just heard from a nearby barnyard.

All was confusion, each cock giving his version of the exclamation. The cock that had started it all stopped in utter amazement at the weird and distorted interpretations that he heard. One exclaimed, "The cock is going to go!"

Followed a clamor, out of which he understood only a few of the remarks, of which "What'll the dude do?" sounded shrill and questioning.

Neighbors, friends and enemies hastened to enlighten the questioner. Then "Plymouth Rock and Who?" The enquirer was not going to miss a single detail. So on until silence. The leaves settled down with a shrug as the hens came eagerly out to try to pacify the agitated Lords of the Barnyard.

The cock that had been in a disastrous fight with Dominecker the day before, filled with the delight of revenge, added with an exultant shriek, "Dominecker, too!"

The first cock turned slowly around, walked back to the hens, and with all the disgust he could muster cried out: "I made an innocent statement, and look at the result. All these cocks have taken delight in turning and twisting it around until it in no way resembles what I said. That's cossip—fowl' gossip—nothing less."

Where Is Thy Sting?

It was one of those heavenly nights in June! The moon played hide-and-seek with the clouds. He had reasons—he didn't want to be the one to tell the tale. For forty minutes Archie had been pouring out his love. At last he came to the finis of the story. In conclusion he whispered fervently, "Natalie, I could die for you!" "I could die for you too, Archie. You bore me to death."

T was in Paris and a fine spring day. As I sauntered down the street I was seized with that strange impulse of spring which always takes the form of wanting new clothes. Hardly had this impulse struck my heart than I passed "La Maison," a famous designer's shop. I could not resist the temptation to enter.

As I stepped into the depths of the velvet carpets and felt the spell of the soft shaded lights I felt as if I, too, could design and create the most beautiful costumes in the world.

Madame must have understood the cravings of my heart, for she silently brought forth the most exquisite and delicate materials, which under my deft fingers were transformed into dainty dresses and hats. It was only then that madame broke the silence.

"Ah, you must take them," she said. "They are yours, created by you, and for you they shall be, for they make you look wonderful, something like—"

"Hell! Hell! I tell you that whoever are given up to vanities shall suffer in hell forevermore."

I came to with a start. The day was beautiful, and I was seated in the sleepy little church, whose echoes were ringing with the emphasis of a country preacher's sermon on "Vanity," the vehemence of which had waked me.

The Man I Love

The man 1 love, his face is round, Yes, rounder than a tennis ball; Always smiling, always happy— He has no rivals, he's my all.

I cannot see him all the time, For he is far, so far away, And like a stealthy, cruel robber, He will not come out in the day.

He is a tantalizing lover, And his charms they all may see; For he smiles on them as sweetly As he ever smiled on me.

But he is kind, he is gentle, Despite the twinkle in his eye; And he lavishes his riches On the beggars who are nigh.

He keeps watch o'er all the cities, O'er lonesome vale and mountain path; He is tender—Oh, I love him! So free is he from human wrath.

Would you know whom thus I worship, Worship most the month of June? Ah, my true love is no other Than the man you see in the moon.

Illusion, Delusion and Mental Confusion

(LOVE LETTERS AS THEY AIN'T WRIT)

HE winds and the elements combine against me, and you, Heart of Mine, are many miles away. How trite, how inane are the feeble attempts of my young companions to attract my interest, to arouse my enthusiasm. That power lies in your hands alone. Hold it there! Guard it safely! Some day perhaps it may mean more in both of our lives than we can ever imagine. Some day . . .

But why think of the future when the present is ours—the wonderful present that almost frightens me with the intensity of its beauty. And the past, rich in memories, rich in love, stands as a thing inviolable—a sacred jewel that can never be torn from us.

You, my love, Heart of My Life, are the setting. Your glowing eyes are liquid pools in which my soul drowns itself, and being drowned, finds new, joyous life. Life and love—and you. What more could mortal heart desire?

What heights are there left to attain? What pleasure unexpressed to one who has walked the mountains with you; whose faltering hands have felt your strong, firm clasp. Who could long for sweeter peace than the knowledge of a perfect love?

My dear, I love you! I wonder if any man, even my own Heart's Life, can really appreciate, really understand the glory, the pain, the wonder, the fierce, unreasoning joy that is the love of a woman?

You are my all—life—and love—and happiness! There is nothing but you! There has never been anything but you! There could never be anything but you. The rest of the universe is blank, meaningless chaos. Love illuminates everything! Love vitalizes everything! My spirit's kiss falls soft upon your eyelids. Good night, Dear Heart! Sweet dreams.

Miss King: "Well, I don't see any reason why you shouldn't "

Our Folks Back Home

(Apologies to Author of "Bill's in Trouble")

I got a letter, parson, from my daughter at N. C. C. An' my poor heart's as heavy as ever it could be-To think the girl's future I had once so nicely planned Should wander from the path of right and come to such an end. I told her when she left us, only three short years ago, She'd find herself a-plowing in a mighty crooked row; She'd miss her father's council and her mother's prayers, too; But she wanted "Higher Education," so what was I to do? I know there's big temptations for a youngster away from home, But I believed our Betty had the sand to go alone, And when she left I warned her of the ever-waiting snares That lie like hidden serpents in life's pathway everywheres; But Betty promised faithful to be careful, and allowed She'd make a reputation that would make us mighty proud. I got the letter Monday, and the story's mighty short-I just can't tell her mother-it will break her poor ol' heart-And so, I reckon, parson, you might break the news to her: Betty was put in the senate; but she doesn't say what for.

My Man

SAW him that first night. Never had I seen anyone so perfect. His face was a picture of intelligence and sympathy. He wore a smile that would have melted the heart of a Bluebeard. As fcr exciting admiration, he had King Arthur beat a mile. I was so taken aback I lost my breath. He did nothing but merely stand there in the library as calmly as if I had known him all my life. I was not able to speak.

Finally I came down to earth with a crash when George said: "Oh, come on; you will have a dozen chances to see him again. Don't get frightened; he affects everyone the same way, and rather takes pride in the fact, I imagine."

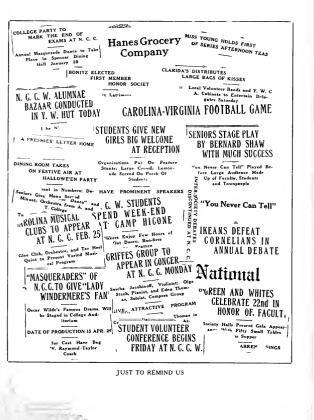

During the next few weeks I was so taken up with summer school that I forgot my man. But destiny was favorable. I was soon to see him again. It was the last Friday night of summer school. I was feeling a little excited over a date with George that night, and I had a presentiment that he was going to say something he oughtn't. All at once I happened to remember my education paper that was far overdue. Saturday morning was the latest it could go in. I ran to the phone and, after much persuasion, canceled the date with George. I rushed upstairs for a note-book, and firmly resolved to do a thing I hadn't done all the summer—study.

I ran up the library steps, looked back, and saw him—My Man—looking at me! He wore the same expression that had thrilled me through and through that first night. I gave him one long look, and then forgot all about education papers, which instructors say are very important if you want school credit. I ran up to him and poured out my whole soul. I revealed to him my deepest secrets and most sacred ambitions. He was the best listener I ever talked to. Not once did he interrupt me, but always looked at me with that understanding smile of his.

The second week after summer school George wrote me a long letter to which he added an interesting postscript. It went like this:

"We are having a holiday tomorrow in honor of the unveiling of the statue, which they say is even more perfect than that one in front of the library you were so daft over this summer."

I wish I was a little rock That lies beneath a tree, And I had never heard of Math., Or had it heard of me.

I wish I was a great big rolling Ocean, or a sea, And all those crazy Math. books Were hurled down into me.

I wish I was the teacher Of every old Math. class; I wouldn't make them work at all, Yet every one I'd pass.
